

Future Business Leaders of America

Presentation By: Andrew Danziger

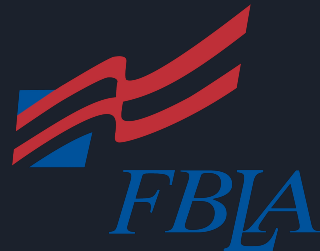

What is FBLA?

The Future Business Leaders of America is the largest student run business organization in the world

The goal of this organization is to branch education and business in positive manner

Equips members with skills that will help in college and careers beyond

Opportunities such as conferences and competitions are available for members to grow, compete, and learn

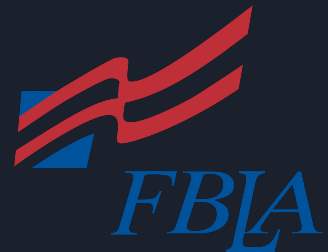

Membership

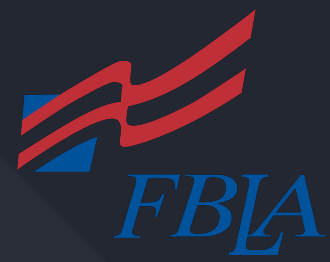

FBLA has over 250,000 members not only nationally but around the globe

FBLA is in all 50 states, and multiple countries and districts around the world such as China, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands

FBLA is not only for high school students but has three levels of the organization

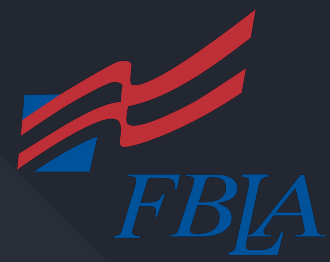

FBLA is also available for adults as well in the Professional Level

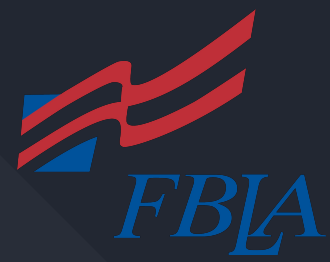

Middle Level

The Middle Level of FBLA is for middle school students and is a great way for members to develop leadership skills from a younger age and become more involved in the club in high school.

FBIA

Future Business Leaders of America, the high school level of the organization, has the largest number of members out of the three, and is the most renowned.

PBL (Phi Beta Lambda)

Phi Beta Lambda is a continuation of FBLA on the collegiate level. Most members were members in their high schools, but new members are encouraged to join as well.

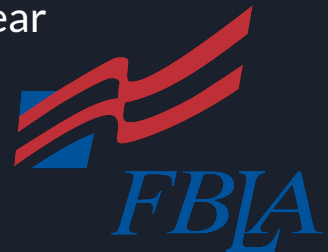

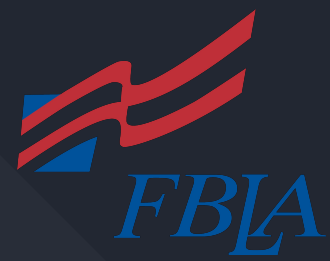

Conferences

A major aspect of FBLA is equipping members with not only knowledge to help them in the future, but in-personal skills that are useful in the business world as well

Annual conferences allow members to participate in networking opportunities through the form of workshops, motivational speakers, socials and more

There are two national conferences and one state conference each year

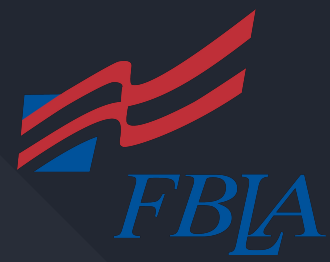

NFLC

(National Fall Leadership Conference)

The National Fall Leadership Conference takes place in three unique destinations every year for the accessibility purposes of our members

Each conference highlights the networking and leadership opportunities available to members

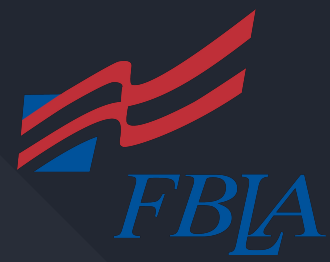

This year the NFLC was held in Albuquerque, New Mexico, Chicago, Illinois, and Charlotte, North Carolina

SLC

(State Leadership Conference)

Come spring time, every state has their own State Leadership Conference where on top of the numerous workshops, motivational speakers, and socials available, members compete in competitions and campaign for a leadership position against others in the state.

NLC

(National Leadership Conference)

At the end of the school year, the nations best competitors go to the National Leadership Conference to compete head to head against one another and national officers are elected

Last year's NLC was hosted in Baltimore, Maryland with an attendance of more than 12,000

Competitions

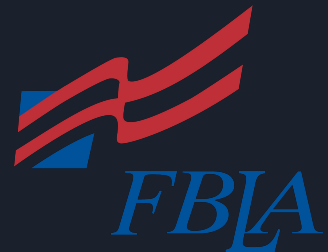

FBLA has over 80 competitive events for members to take part in

Members who prefer to work alone are open to participating in individual tests or presentations

Members who prefer to work with other are open to participating in group tests or presentations

Competitions consist of written tests, speaking competitions (both impromptu and prepared), and presentations

Competitions range in topic and type so there is one for every type of member

Officer Campaigning

Members who look to run for a state or national leadership position must have an interview and submit an application consisting of questions, qualifications, resume, cover letter, and transcript

Once the aforementioned items are submitted on time, members are required to take an officer exam and receive a score of 65 percent or higher

Finally, at either the State or National Leadership Conference, members must deliver a speech for their position, as well as run a booth for their campaign.

A heated and anticipated part of FBLA, members look forward to hearing candidates' goals as well as receiving campaign giveaways
